To Whom It May Concern:

SUBJECT: David Mappes

Dr. David Mappes has held a faculty appointment in the Department of Biblical Education at Cedarville University since August 1999, currently with the rank of Associate Professor. In that capacity he has taught a variety of courses, including general education Bible courses and upper division courses in the Bible major. These courses include general epistles, introduction to Bible study, both Old and New Testament literature, God and church, spiritual formation, Christian worldview integration, pastoral ministry, pastoral counseling, the Book of Acts, and a senior research seminar. In addition, he has supervised the internship program for pastoral ministry majors. Dr. Mappes has fulfilled these instructional responsibilities in a commendable fashion. We have been very satisfied with his performance.

In addition, Dr. Mappes has served on University and Department committees, along with assisting in student development efforts, such as the Cedarville University-sponsored premarital counseling ministry program, "Fit-to-be-Tied." Dr. Mappes also has maintained commendable involvement in his local church.

Furthermore, Dr. Mappes has demonstrated good scholarship. He was repeatedly commended for his scholarly endeavors during his tenure at Cedarville University. He has published articles in theological journals and written pastoral-related articles in Inspire, the Cedarville Alumni magazine. He also has published An Exposition of the Book of Acts, an adult Sunday school curriculum. He is active in the Evangelical Theological Society and has presented papers at regional and national meetings.

Dr. Mappes has proven to be an effective teacher and scholar with a warm heart for students. I encourage you to consider him for a position at your institution.

Sincerely yours,

William E Brown
